

COMPASSIONATE COMMUNITIES

Palliative care can help people manage the side effects of their medical treatments. True

Palliative care specialists can help people managing treatment side effects such as pain, shortness of breath, or nausea. They know about the medicines to control various types of pain. Palliative care providers also may recommend treatments other than medicines such as physical therapy, massage, or the use of heat or cold.